Method 1:

Tell a story which includes strength, fear, and aggression.
Put on music which interprets these emotions
(for example trumpets, symbols, or large drums).

Tell the children to make a clay animal in keeping with the story and the music. Leave the music on to support the creative process, at an acceptable volume. Discuss what animals were created and why.

Method 2:

Now tell a story which is all about happiness, love and trust. Put on music which interprets these emotions (for example Chopin or New Age).

Tell the children to make a clay animal in keeping with the story and the music. Once again, leave the music on (at a low volume) to support the process. Discuss what animals were created and why.
